Damon and Pythias.

A full house greeted Frederick Warde last night in his personation of the character of Damon in John Baum's romantic five-act play "Damon and Pythias." The audience was an appreciative one and the tragedian appeared in his best form. Warde's perception of the character of Damon is very fine; at no time does he depart from it into personality. No one can fail to be deeply impressed with him as he appears for the first time on the stage in a voice which thrills with its sadness. His genius is apparent at once and its brilliancy does not pale throughout the play. The first intimation of his powerful oratory is shown as he stands in this act with uplifted hands and cries in inexpressible sadness, "Oh, Syracuse, I am at length forced to despair of thee!" In the second act, where he bursts upon Pythias and Calanthe as they stand talking of their approaching wedding and in his endeavors to explain to Pythias the contemplated coronation of Dionysius, and at the same time to appear natural to Calanthe, he displays great art. His entrance to the senate chamber in the second act and his answer, "A senator," to the question, "Who is there?" is executed with the precision of studied art. In this scene he is superb, and as he calls again for the vote in thunder tones he soars to the summit of oratory.

When Dionysius stalks him through reference to his wife and child, he again exhibits great art in struggling with his emotions. Throughout the whole play he was weak in no single point, though the opening of the scene with his wife in their villa, whither he had fled after Pythias had pledged himself for Damon's return, was a little strained. In the closing of this scene, in parting with his boy, he brought tears to many eyes. In the last scene, he staggers into the presence of Pythias, who is about to die, with the naturalness of life itself, and in this scene does he exhibit qualities which cannot fail to command the admiration of all who see him. The support was generally good. We have naught but words of praise for the Pythias of Mr. John T. Malone. He rivaled the star for the honors of the evening almost as much as Pythias did Damon in the nobility of his friendship. He was especially fine in the prison scene where Dionysius in disguise was tempting him to flee, and won a well-deserved call before the curtain when it fell on this act. L. E. Rand played the part of Dionysius with considerable power. The rest of the male support was fair, and Lucullus the slave, as personated by Mr. J. M. Sturgeon, was very fine. We prophesy a brilliant future for this excellent young actor. The Hermon of Miss Sara Naville was well rendered, but the Calanthe of Miss Anna Boyle was weak in one or two instances, notably so in the poison scene where she attempts to persuade Pythias to fly, but in the last scene, where she is watching for Damon's return, she does some very pretty acting. Mr. Warde was called before the curtain several times to receive the tributes of a grateful audience, and when he again returns to Fort Worth he will be greeted by immense houses.

THE COURTS.

In the district court yesterday the county attorney entered a nolle prosequi in the case of the state vs. D. A. January, mention of which is made elsewhere. Court adjourned until this morning.
In the county court the jury in the case of Redwood vs. Schwartz & Co. returned a verdict for the defendants. The case of J. C. Scott vs. Chas. Marklee was on trial when court adjourned until to-day.

IN BRIEF.

It is raining again.
After four days silence, the bell on the court house again rings out the hour.
The average citizen and our country cousins are again happy, as they look up at the clock in the tower to see the time of day.
Arrested for Theft.
A young man who gave the name of J. M. Martin went to the livery stable of James S. Curry, in the town of Colburne, last Wednesday and hired a horse for three days, saying he was a canvasser for a man named Schwartz. The man, horse or buggy did not show up on Saturday, and Mr. Turner wrote the police of this city about the occurrence. They succeeded in finding Martin, who was stopping at the Mississippi house where he had pledged the horse for a month's board. He was arrested on the charge of theft, waived examination and was committed to jail in default of $500 bail.

A Pleasant Visit.

The GAZETTE sanctum was honored yesterday with a visit from Mr. Frederick Warde, and Mr. Jno. T. Malone, his support, and Mr. J. J. Collins, his manager. The hour they spent served to lighten the editorial labor for the rest of the day, and will be remembered with pleasure.

Matrimonial.

Last night an interesting event occurred at the house of Mr. E. M. Brown, being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Eva Brown, to Mr. W. R. Woodson. The ceremony was neatly performed by Rev. Mr. Gillespie, in the presence of a large number of friends. Miss Zippewier, a cousin of the bride from Pecoria, Illinois, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Z. J. Reese as groomsmen. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome presents from their friends. A most elegant supper followed the ceremony. Many congratulations were tendered the newly-wedded pair, and hearty good wishes speeded them on their bridal tour.

O. Bother.

It is nothing but an advertisement, is about what the average reader says when he picks up the family paper and commences to read what he imagines to be an article on political economy or some of the leading topics of the day, and finds that the article is written in the interest of some business firm, but, after all, the reader knows there is something in these advertisements that is of interest to him. If he never had anything to buy it would be different. Advertising in newspapers has long since been recognized as one of the best ways of reaching the masses, and the people understand when they see an announcement from a house like Randall & Chambers Co., they will find the goods just as advertised.

Their display ad. for this week makes mention of some pleasing prices in clothing and low reductions in ladies' dress goods and wraps. Besides they have many goods suitable for Christmas presents in the way of handkerchiefs, mittens, gloves, etc.

ACKER'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS NEVER FAIL. L. N. Brunswick.

Women's Rights.

I say, Mr. Jones. I want you to buy me a carpet for the front room the next time you go to Fort Worth. This way you have of putting everything into stock and lands, don't suit me. You can get it as sort of a Christmas present if you like; but mind, I am going to have it, so you might as well make up your mind. The last time I was over to see Mrs. Robinson she said her's only cost 37½ cents per yard at Randall & Chambers Co., so you can go right there and get it.

Fried potatoes (Saratoga chips) at TURNER & McCLEURE'S.

Fine yellow nansemond sweet potatoes. TURNER & McCLEURE.

A very mild winter. It is true this has been an exceptionally mild winter so far, but old settlers say it is a sure sign that we will have rough weather in January and February. Parents who have delayed buying cloaks for their children will find the very bottom knocked out of prices at Randall & Chambers Co., and those wishing to economize in this line, should see their stock of waterproofs and heavy ladies cloths, the latter one and a half yards wide, and all wool at $1.00 per yard.

The best Iowa creamery butter. TURNER & McCLEURE.

Dissolution Notice.

The firm of Zeller & Stanley have dissolved by mutual consent. All parties indebted to the above firm will settle with Charles Zeller.

Signed T. E. STANLEY.

Having succeeded the firm of Zeller & Stanley, we will conduct the wholesale fruit, produce and vegetable business at the old stand, on the south side of the square, Fort Worth, Texas.

We have a car due to-morrow from New Orleans composed of Louisiana oranges, Rutan bananas, Honduras coconuts, Messina lemons and Malaga grapes, which we are offering to the trade. Our motto is promptness, goods fully guaranteed at bed rock prices. Hoping to gain part of the extensive patronage bestowed on the old firm, we remain respectfully,

Old orchard vinegar a specialty at TURNER & McCLEURE'S.

Lectures.

The Fort Worth business college propose a series of lectures to their students. The first lecture will be given at 7:30 to-night at the college rooms, corner of Fifth and Main streets. Rev. John Collins, president of Mansfield college, and also president of the state teachers' association, will deliver the series, the opening lecture of the series, so something worth hearing may be expected.

Banqueting the Worthy.

Last night after the performance several friends of Mr. Frederick Warde, the tragedian, invited him out and a couple of hours were spent in pleasant feasting and social chat. Mr. Warde has added many friends and admirers by his engagement here, and when next he comes may expect even larger houses than those he had.

WHAT WE HAVE FOR SALE.

As winter weather is, generally speaking, cold weather, we have filled our store with Good, Warm Clothing, calculated to keep people from freezing. If you are afraid that we are not going to have any winter at all, and you will call at our store, we will provide you with a linen duster or any other desirable summer garment that you may happen to think of. If we should do, however, you will purchase heavy clothing and flannel underwear. This "beautiful" weather, as the old maids call it, will not last, until the first day of March, and you know it. There is no occasion to run a "chase for bargains" Without running. Purchasing, you will always find desirable bargains in Men's Wearing Apparel at the one-price outfitting establishment of Chas. E. Ford's Comic Opera Company at the Fort Worth Opera House.

On Monday evening, December 17th, Millocker's charming comic opera, entitled "The Beggar Student," will be sung for the first time in this city by Chas. E. Ford's Comic Opera company, and Tuesday evening, December 18th, Planquette's celebrated opera, and his latest success, entitled "Rip Van Winkle." Speaking of its presentation in Galveston last week, the News of December 8th says: "Those who have seen the ever-to-be appreciated 'Rip' in the comedy, can find enough in the opera to make them lean generously to the song work, recognizing the run of the story through, but seeing so many innovations and changes and so much new work that bears a look of newness that has about it a cast of genuineness. Rip is there, Gretchen is there, Meenie, Hans, Derrick, and all the rest, even to the inn in the village of Falling Water. But instead of the vagabond, there is given Rip, the good-natured cup-loving fellow, with a merry-hearted wife, who, with him and like him, is a rebel, and who sends him to the mountain with a blessing. Miss Alice May first as Gretchen, and afterwards as Meenie Van Winkle, sang and acted with a grace and charming effectiveness that won the warm plaudits of the audience. Mr. Edgar Khan as 'Rip' established fully his right to recognition as a strong comedy actor. Miss Louise Elsing as Katrina made a most favorable impression, and Mr. Carlberg as Peter fully succeeded in capturing the hearts of the audience. There is something in the music of 'Rip Van Winkle' that will cause it to linger long in memory's heart. The sale of reserved seats for the operas of 'Rip Van Winkle' and 'The Beggar Student' are now on sale at Max Elser's book and stationery store.
